

Abstract

An organic material film formed on a surface of an object to be processed is cured by electron beams irradiated thereon through a hydrocarbon radical generating gas. By 5 employing the electron beams and the hydrocarbon radical generating gas, a deterioration of a k value of the organic material film and a reduction of a chemical resistance thereof are suppressed.

10